What is CMALT?

CMALT stands for 'Certified Member of the Association of Learning Technologies'. It is a form of recognition of experience and capability in the wider field of implementation and support of learning technologies in higher education.

CMALT originated in the UK, under the management and moderation of the Association for Learning Technology (ALT) and has been officially extended to Australasia under the auspices of ascilite.

There are currently around 230 certified CMALT members, including about eight certified through CMALT Australasia.

Full details of CMALT Australasia may be found at <http://ascilite.org/get-involved/cmalt/>

What is the CMALT Australasia Community of Practice?

In 2015 ascilite is proactively supporting CMALT Australasia by offering mentoring opportunities and incentives to those preparing their portfolio. There will be two parts to this support:

1. The CMALT Australasia 2015 Community of Practice will offer mentoring, advice and support through online check-in and support sessions on preparing and submitting a portfolio.
2. Ascilite will offer a one-off $A250 subsidy for successful CMALT Australasia applicants, who have been participants in the CMALT Australasia CoP 2015, to register for the ascilite2015 conference in Perth. This subsidy will be limited to 8 applicants, and will be on a first-come first-served basis (see conditions below).
